David Roberts

Narrator 1, Narrator 2, Narrator 3, Narrator 4,
Bertie, Mom, Dad, Grandma, Suzy

Narrator 1: This is Bertie. He likes making smells.

Narrator 2: Bertie farted at the dentist. It was smelly!

Mom: Pee-Ew! Is that you, Bertie? That's not good manners.

Narrator 3: Bertie let off a bigger one in the museum and giggled. No one else did. It stank.

Dad: Pee-Ew! Is that, Bertie? I've never been so embarrassed.

Narrator 4: At the café Bertie let off a really regal one. It smelled worse than a rotten egg.

Grandma: Pee-Ew! Is that you, Bertie? It's not nice to pass gas in the café—not when people are eating.

Narrator 1: Bertie let rip a big one in his sister Suzy's playhouse. It reeked. Suzy was livid.

Suzy: Pee-Ew! Is that you, Bertie? You stink, smelly pants.

Bertie: I'm not the only one who stinks. When mom farts, she coughs at the same time to cover it up. When dad lets off, he's so sneaky...you don't know what's coming until it hits you. Grandma's always letting go. She just blames the cat. Suzy claims she never farts. But she sounds like a brass band when she thinks no one is listening! And when the dog farts, he fans it all around.

Narrator 2: So there!

Narrator 3: Everybody does it.

Narrator 4: But Bertie does it best.

Bertie: Especially in the bath!

All except Bertie: Pee-Ew! Is that you, Bertie?
